Seeing the Invisible.

When the way we should tread runs evenly,
And light as the morning is over it all,
The strange how our feet will turn aside
To the path where we would most grope and fail.

How we suffer, knowing it all the while,
Some phantom between ourselves and the light,
That shuns in darkness, strange and slight,
The very powers of sense and sight.

Yet we live so, all of us, I think,
Hiding whatever of truth we choose,
And deceiving ourselves with a subtlety
That never a soul but our own could use.

We see the love in another's eyes,
Where our own, reflected, is backward sent;
Or we hear a tone that is not a tone,
And find a meaning that is not meant.

We put our faith in the help of those Who never have been a help at all;
And lean on an object that all the while
We know we are holding back from its fall.

When words seem thoughts, or deeds unkind,
We are soothed with the kind intent, instead;
And we say of the absent silent one,
He is faithful—but he is sick, or dead!

We have loved some dear familiar step,
That once in its fall was firm and clear;
And that household music's sweetest sound
Came fainter every day to our ear.

And then we have talked of the far away—
Of the spring to come and the years to be,
When the rose should bloom in our dear one's cheek,
And her feet should tread in the meadow, free!

We have turned from death to speak of life,
When we knew that earthily hope was past—
Yet thinking that, somehow, God would work
A miracle for us, to the last.

We have seen the bed of a cherished friend Pushed daily nearer and nearer, till
It stood at the very edge of the grave,
And we looked across and beyond it, still.

As, more than this—we have come and gazed Down where that dear one's mortal part
Was lowered from the life of the world,
And we did not die of a broken heart.

Are we blind? nay, we know that the world unknown
Is all we would make the present seem;
That our Father keeps till his own good time
The things we dream of, and more than we dream.

For we shall not sleep, but we shall be changed;
And when that change at the last is made,
We shall bring nothing down to face
With our souls, and we shall not be afraid!

VARIETY.

He is not so good as he should be who does not strive to be better than he is.

When two opposite extremes are presented to you, it is generally safe as well as honorable to play the part of a go-between.

Why is a bee-hive like a bad potato? A bee-hive is a beeholder, and a beeholder is a spectator, and a speckled tater is a bad tater.

There are few who do not think of you more kindly if you meet their request with an affectionate denial than with a cold compliance.

A man never indulges in low personal slang and blackguardism in controversy, until his stock of argument and facts have been exhausted.

To smile at the just that plants a thorn in another breast is to become a principal in the mischief.

How few there are who abstain from such smiling.

Broken resolutions are worse than none at all; it only proves to us we do not carry out the dictation of our own conscience, and exposes our weakness.

"Old age is coming upon me rapidly," as the archbishop said when he was stealing apples from an old man's garden, and saw the owner coming, cowering in hand.

A wag of an editor says: "Two weeks ago Sunday,
we rode out of church on a splendid silk robe, drawn by a lady half six feet distant. Mentally we replied: 'Where's the use of street cars?'"

There is an excellent precept which he who has received an injury, or who thinks he has, would for his own sake, do well to follow, "Excuse half and forgive the rest."

Two old New England Ministers were riding by a gallows when the minister asked the other, "Where would you be if that tree bore its proper fruit?"
"Riding alone, sir," was the immediate reply.

"Sleep, like death, is a great relief," said Mr.
B., yawning, as he closed a large volume just before retiring; "Plato, while asleep, was no greater than any other mortal; ergo, when asleep I'm as great as Plato."

A Botany Bay anecdote tells of a convict who got on so well, on that side of the world, (Australia) that he rose to the magistracy; and making some hard reflections on a person brought before him whom he saw five shillings, the delinquent retorted, "There's the money; I remember the time in England when I should have liked much less to meet you with five shillings in my pocket."

A SMART LAD—A boy from the country was recently told to a gentleman's family. One evening, after having been called up into the drawing room,
he came down into the kitchen laughing immoderately.
"What the matter?" cried the cook.
"Why," said he, "there are twelve on 'em up there, who could not snuff the candle, and they had to ring for I to do it."

MISCELLANEOUS—
I do consider marketeers
The posy of all God's creatures.

I have finally retched it. I have like a man led to the slaughter, and had my blood sucked out of me so that I was only a white skin, and belonged to somebody else. I am a man of peace, but, low and behold! there isn't a piece in me but is bit and poked and pricked in your ear.

When murderers whisper in your ear,
The devil's angels are having near.

I retired last night to rest at the usual time. On the left side of me, and about 2 feet adjacent was the side of the house; on the other side of me and about 2 feet adjacent, I lay in bed. I dropped to sleep as a snowflake daz on the buzz of a silvery lake.
(I have a faint idea that this last sentence for liveliness can't be beat handy.) I dreamed a good sized, hot dream.

It felt like the breath of a Kansas blizzard
Around my head, trying to whistle.

Suddenly I woke; the room was full of yell and shrieks of despair. I dashed wildly across the room. I lit a light. I harked one or two most reliable harks. A wail rose still—still as a crow's nest in dead or winter. I gazed a gaze as though I were trying to thred the wrong end of a cambric cord. Away in the distance, solitary and alone, close up to the ceiling, chawin his cud, sat a little gray cuss. I dipped a coarse towel into a basin of water and rung it out. I kept up under the little gray cuss—I took aim and fired.

And hit the spot
Where the little gray cuss sat.

Aw! wuz still again. I onit the candle and sought my couch.

I slept again as on the virtuous can sleep.—Josh Billings.

boiling power, from damp wood, or from any other cause, the addition of a few hundred pounds of any of the above
Coal will add from 20 to 50 per cent. to the evaporating power.
The Leigh Coal is very clean and smokeless and gives a great local heat.
The Welsh Coal gives more flame and is very clean, burning to a white ash.
The Nainaina Coal is smoky and more inclined to clinker, but when supplied in small quantities at a time and with a good draft gives more flame than the others.
The undersigned cordially recommend to Sugar Planters a TRIAL of a few tons each of the above, as in many cases an expense of say $10 per day may add from 25 to 50 per cent.
to the daily yield of sugar. JANION, GREEN & CO.
